Problem with that is the 630 Union – a raise that big would cost you more with them, even if you rolled back insurance, because they're not getting near so much Holiday and OT pay.

I can believe it. They may want to after we point out that they've already gotten a 10% raise through this cockamamie Holiday/OT policy. You can tell them you'll give them a $3000 average raise, but the Insurance gets capped at $10,000 and the OT/Holiday/Leave policy rolls back to what it was before. That's rough numbers, and I'd need to fine tune that, but you would come out ahead and they'd get money in their pocket, and money for working, not for taking Sick and Vacation days.
